Steven Rinella, founder of MeatEater, counts on his Can-Am Defender to get into the backcountry.

Valcourt, Quebec, October 28, 2025 – Can-Am, iconic brand of BRP Inc. (TSX:DOO; NASDAQ:DOOO), is proud to announce an expanded partnership with MeatEater, one of the leading voices in outdoor lifestyle and conservation. While the two brands have worked together in the past, this new chapter of the relationship will see Can-Am join the Official MeatEater Partnership Program as MeatEater's exclusive powersports partner. This collaboration represents the shared ethos of the brands, highlighting their commitment to ethical and sustainable hunting and fishing practices and the pursuit of adventure in the outdoors.

As part of this partnership, Can-Am products will be featured in MeatEater content across all media, from the "MeatEater" television series, whose 13th season debuted on Monday, October 20, to the MeatEater Podcast Network, and the company's engaging social media content. Can-Am will supply Steven Rinella and the MeatEater talent crew with all-terrain vehicles (ATV) and side-by-sides (SSV) that are specifically equipped for their outdoor pursuits, including in this season of MeatEater's flagship television program airing across Sportsman Channel (on cable), YouTube (@MeatEaterTV), Samsung (MeatEater Channel), and other leading ad-supported video on demand platforms. Whether it's hauling gear, accessing remote locations, or simply enjoying the ride, the versatile Defender and Outlander vehicles by Can-Am are purpose-built for fueling adventure. In addition to Can-Am products, the MeatEater team will have access to the full line of BRP products, including Sea-Doo watercrafts and Ski-Doo snowmobiles.

"At Can-Am, we build ATVs and SSVs that help people go farther into the wild, and this partnership with MeatEater is about making sure those wild places remain open, respected, and enjoyed for generations to come," said Jeremi Doyon-Roch, Marketing Director at Can-Am Off-Road. "As one of the most authentic voices in the hunting and outdoor community, MeatEater is the perfect partner for Can-Am to showcase the versatility and real-world applications of our machines."

"Our mission has always been to inspire people to experience the outdoors in meaningful ways," said Andrew Barge, Chief Content Officer at MeatEater. "By partnering with Can-Am and their family of brands, we're equipping our crew, and our audience, with the tools to go farther, explore deeper, and discover new frontiers in outdoor adventure."

"I've been using and recommending Can-Am products for years, and I'm excited to hit the trails this winter on my Ski-Doo snowmobile," said Steven Rinella. "This partnership makes perfect sense for MeatEater, because it's built on a genuine love for the equipment."

Together, Can-Am and MeatEater are committed to inspiring a new generation of outdoor enthusiasts to explore responsibly, hunt ethically, and protect access to the outdoors for years to come.
